MORE SENATORS EAGER TO AID U.S. EMPLOYES

Sentiment in Upper Chamber Crystallizing in Favor of Raise.

A large majority of the Senate is in favor of increasing the salaries of em-ployes under the $1.500 class, and there is yet to be discovered a Senator who believes the government should pay a man less than the duties he performs justify.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, expressed a sentiment yesterday which is in full accord with the views of many other Senators when he declared: "I would be ashamed of myself if I

"I would be ashamed of myself if I did not favor a bill to increase the salaries of the government employe who is making hardly enough to sustain himself and family, especially when the cost of living is as high ag it is now.

Other Senators yesterday climbed upon the "band-wagon," announcing their intention to vote for any safe and sane measure which would do justice to the employes to whom justice is due. They are Senator Cummins, of Iows, one of the Republican leaders; Senator Thompson, of Kansas; Senator Thomas, of Colorado, candidate for President pro-teni orado, candidate for President pro-tem of the Senate; Senator Jones, of Wash-ington, Progressive-Republican leader and one of the most active "reformers" the Senate; Senator Smith, of Arizona Hopeful of Success.

It is the opinion of these Senators that

Senate leaders assume an extremely cautious attitude, however, when a general horizontal increase in pay is mentioned. But there is no mistaking the sympathy among them for the clerks and sympathy among them for the cherna and laborers who are forced to grapple with the high coat of living, with a pay en-velope ranging from $2,000 a year to $450 velope ranging from a year as their only weapon.

"The Federal government should set an example to the country," said Senator Jones, "by doing something very soon for the relief of employes who are under-paid. There are a lot of employes who are getting only about $400 or $500 a year. How they manage to live I cannot conceive. These are the men who have my warmest sympathy. The government should not pay any laborer less than $50 month. How a man can support a family on less than that is more than I can fathom. I am not in favor of increasing the pay of the employes who are already getting good salaries, but the man who is working for almost next to nothing is deserving of all my sym-

Senator Smith declared that he had "an intense sympathy with the man who isn't paid enough for his work, whether employed by the government or by a private concern." A bill that is aimed to relieve conditions among government em-ployes who are in need of assistance would neet his hearty support, Senator Smith asserted. "The government ought to pay as anyone else would for the work that is done," he said, "and there are a lot of poor fellows who now aren't getting enough.

Champion of Cause, of the warmest champions of the ederal employe is Senator Cummins, Iowa, who is heartily in accord with the movement to increase the pay of Uncle "Any employe of the government ought to get enough to live on decently," Sena-tor Cummins stated emphatically. "Many clerks are getting $2,500 a year. That isn't enough, I believe, but they can manage to live on it, even under pres ent conditions. It is the clerks and the laborers who are getting under $2.500 who have my keenest sympathy. It is very hard for them to make both ends meet, now especially, and a great many of them cannot, certainly those who are getting under $1,000 a year. I would be very glad to see Congress pass a bill affording a just increase to these men." said Senator Cummins, "and it would get my vote."

Senator Thompson declared: "It would be simply an act of justice o provide better pay for small-salaried

But to pay his bills he has to have the money, and I think it is only an act of justice for the government to a g an act of justice for the government to pay its employes enough to live on with-out being forced to cheat either his grocer or his landlord."

Senator Thompson expressed the opinion that the high cost of foodstuffs would disappear at the close of the European war or else will be greatly reduced. PROPER USE OF TIME DISCUSSED BY WRITER

C. S. B., writes as follows:

we have all the time there is in which to accomplish certain tasks, but the question which naturally arises is whether man, one who in "It is a very easy matter to say that we are spending it profitably or unprofit-ably. Whatever spiritual talents we may possess, it is the use we make of them thoughts as were pleasing to the Father. in the sight of God.

"The individual who does not know to spiritual things. In such a mental state he will constantly be waiting for the more 'convenient season,' which never comes. With an infinite being the comes. With an infinite being there can be no such thing as time. God, therefore, does not reason from any standpoint of finiteness or human limitation. Every thing pertaining to the kingdom of heaven is embraced in the infinite conclousness of an ever-present now. What ever is perfect, therefore, always has been and always will be perfect. The moment individual human consciousness admits this spiritually metaphysical fact that moment it begins to understand man's relationship to God. Then and then only does one realize the imperative need of making proper use of one's time

No Time With God. "Time is a synonym for mortal thinking in all its moods. In the infinite activity of the one Mind there is no thought of time. When all mortal thinking ceases, and the earth is filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea, time will be no more. It is needless to say that Christian Science has brought this understanding of the Science of being to the world, so that no one who has proved the truth that 'all is Mind and Mind's idea' (Science and Health, p. 492), can any longer plead ignorance of the demand upon him as an individual. The student of Christian Science knows, beyond all question of a doubt that God demands of him every hour of every day in which to practice the Science of being. To him the command to be perfect is no theoretical abstracto be perfect is no theoretical abstrac-tion, but a practical and demonstrable reality; it is the straight and narrow way leading heavenward. Were it im-possible for him here and now to reduce to practice the divine Principle of spiritual perfection, he would be as one having no hope, and without God in the world. He would cease to be a Christian Scientist the moment he failed to apply the Principle of perfection to his own daily thinking and living. "It is frequently said of the Christmas

Scientist that he works from the standpoint of Principle. To work from any other would be only a waste of time. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths, is the dictum of Scripture on this point. This the Scienother would be only a waste of time. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths, is the dictum of Scripture on this point. This the Scientist is striving to do by admitting the future existence, is far removed from all-power, all-presence, and reality of divine Mind, Spirit, or God, and reject-ing the sense-supposition of a man and a universe of imperfection. If he loves man, one who improved every moment of his time by thinking only such though which identifies us as either drones or workers in the Father's vineyard. The mere hoarding of material riches may often make us paupers instead of princes with reality or eternity. If we would follow in his footsteps, we too must learn to improve our moments, before "The individual who does not know that God is unceasingly demanding something of him, does not know how to spend his time. About as far as the average man goes, is to concede that God wants him to be as good as he possibly can be in this present world; but the admonition of the Master for him to be perfect even as the Father is perfect, does not make any practical appeal to him. Failing as he does to grasp the methaphysical meaning of this Scriptural command, he likewise fails to comprefore can and will be eventually overcome.

"This is the great problem confronting every human being, the overcoming of all sense-limitations, of all that constitutes the belief or consciousness of an existence which begins and ends. Sooner or later must humanity awaken to the fact that time is but a temporal dream and that eternity is the enduring and the real. The real man is already related to eternity. It but remains for humanity to awaken from the mesmeric prehend the spiritual and eternal fact of being, that man is the conscious image and likeness of God; in other words, the ever-present activity of right If there is a human being who could wish for man anything more ex-alted than to be the conscious, active reflection or manifestation of infinite intelligence, he is certainly hard to please. The student of Christian Science can say from the heart with the psalmist, I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with

"There is with humanity a mistaken belief that time will sooner or later solve every human problem. Time never ac-complished anything, unless mortal thoughts, theories, beliefs, and opinions are capable of benefiting the human race Waiting on time to work out any human problem leaves the trammels and limitations of sense-testimony undistributed, while waiting on divine Love is a conscious recognition of the eternal facts of being which annals material law and brings out the practical demonstration of Truth in the healing of sickness and sin It is thinking above the mortal or human, above the belief in time and space, which reaches the altitude of answer prayer. Mortal thinking asks amiss. prayer. without any scientific grasp of the Science of being. Its request remains manswered because it is based upon the suppositional realty of time rather than upon any basic understanding of etern-ity. The belief that eternal life begins for a mortal only as a post-morten leg-acy, will never usher any one into the kingdom of reality.
